But by a desire to make the dreams of his artists and pals come true.
How rare and special that was...*

and his crucial role in that wonderful voyage*

Sir George Martin
Beatles Record Producer

*First of all he picked them. He actually said 'I want to be your manager... I want to look after you.
And if he hadn't brought them to me, I wouldn't have recorded them.
He gave them style... He gave them taste.... He gave them their charm and their impeccability in dress.
He was a dear man and he had a great deal of talent*

Derek Taylor

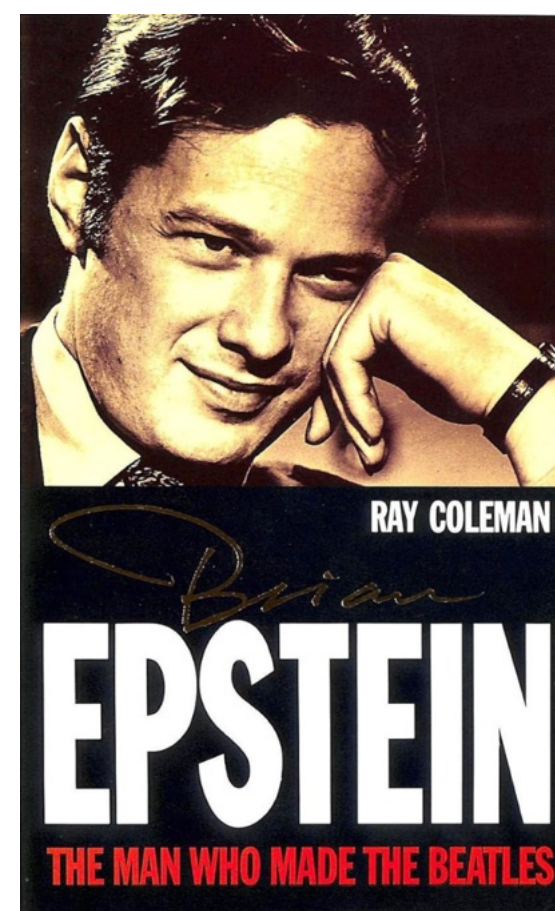

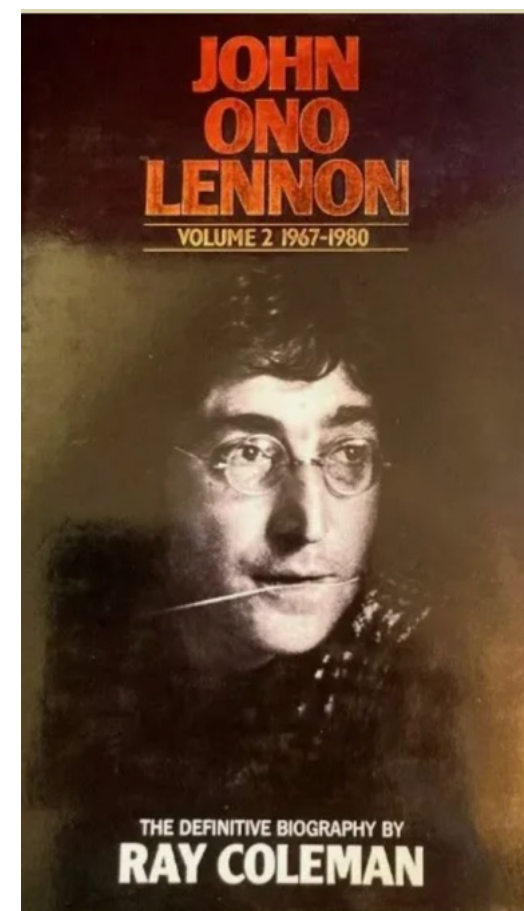

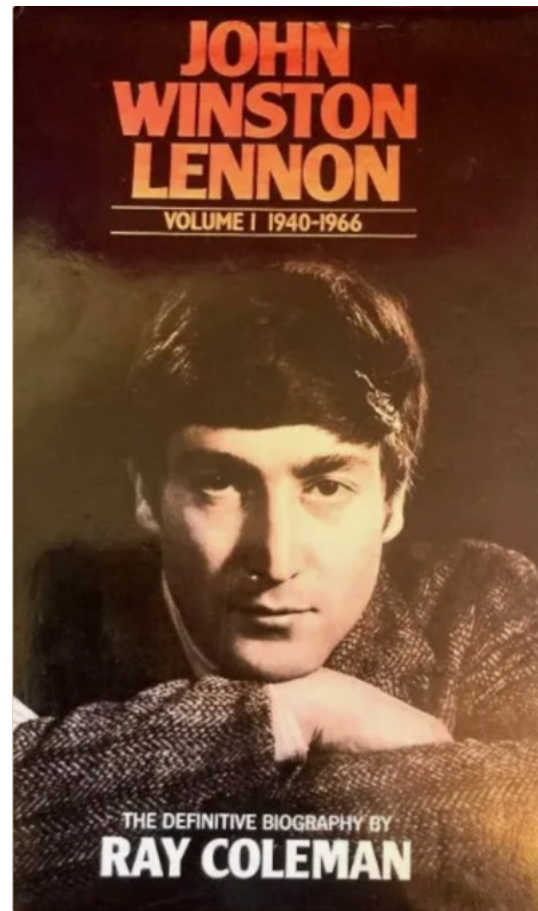

Beatles Publicist & Assistant to Brian Epstein

*Brian Epstein is a crucial part of the Beatles story. Brian was a most wonderful chap...
A terrifically good servant for them. Brian gave them a very, very nice road.
Really quite a carefree way into fame by taking care of business.
When he 'went' it was pretty well all over in terms of direction.*

Ray Coleman

Biographer of John Lennon & Brian Epstein

Brian Epstein's special qualities were his honesty, passion, determination, and the fact that he was a loyal friend and trustworthy. He cared very, very deeply for them. He believed from the moment he saw them that they were going to be the world stars they became. He was absolutely passionate that they were the best in the world. He predicted that from Day One to me and to anyone else who would listen. So he had that unique vision of what he saw coming... He steered them very, very well. His technique was excellent. Nothing could come close to what he gave them - which was absolute love - and that's irreplaceable. And they needed that in those days. They needed a man with wisdom and a little bit of money. He also had grace and charm, which impressed a lot of people worldwide. I think there is no doubt that had they not had a manager of Brian Epstein's determination I don't think that they would have emerged from Liverpool. Without Brian Epstein we wouldn't have seen the Beatles. That's my strong view...
